Our Unique Timbers

The world class timbers available from Western Australia's sustainably managed forests are as beautiful and diverse as the country in which they grow. Today, natural feature timber is the most sought after from the State's unique range. Developing consumer tastes, combined with increased value adding has seen the evolution of a high quality timber product with a natural appeal appreciated by all.

Nature's Natural Furniture Story

Trees growing in Western Australian forests and woodlands weather a lifetime of environment adversities handed out by nature. Bushfires, drought, insect and fungal attack are just some of the natural elements that affect the life cycle of Western Australian forest trees.

The history of these harsh conditions is recorded in every tree; gum streaks, borer holes and irregular timber grain are all natural features and characteristics caused by nature. Such features are now keenly sought after by designers and manufacturers to produce high quality but unique Western Australian hardwood furniture and flooring that have been recognised by consumers for the past decade.

Western Australia's forest management practices are renowned worldwide as being of a very high standard.

The State Government's "Protecting our old growth forests" policy provides for the protection of old growth forests and the sustainability of regrowth forests and plantations.

Through conscientious forest management and dedicated development by WA manufacturers' and downstream processors, natural feature timber is now being used in a range of high quality, highly sought after timber products, especially furniture and flooring.

Jarrah regrowth forest

People with individual tastes and a desire for natural timber products are well provided for by Western Australian quality hardwood timbers.

A selective process that starts from the bush and ends with the final consumer maintains the quality and dedication that provide superb natural feature products. Each board is accurately sawn, kiln-dried and machined to accurate dimensions, to ensure that optimal quality timber is produced.

Colours ranging from the earthy red shades of jarrah (Eucalyptus marginata) to the delicate honey tones of marri (Corymbia calophylla), are available to suit any home or décor. The natural features provide subtle, yet attractive characteristics that are always highly distinctive. Each piece is truly beautiful and unique.

Western Australian feature timber is recognised for its beautiful colour, grain and figure, but is also hard and durable. These essential characteristics are required for quality furniture and flooring that will last in your family for generations.

You will be able to show family and friends your unique furniture or flooring. Sit around and enjoy your refreshments and reflect on the past, then look forward to your piece of furniture becoming a family heirloom.

When purchasing Western Australian natural feature timber in a finished piece, or looking at creating your own masterpiece, you will have peace of mind knowing that your natural feature timber has been kiln-dried to an Australian Standard, which ensures stability and quality.
